

Recreation

Although a final decision has not been made on the recreational activities that will be provided in the area of Hard Labor Creek Regional Reservoir, the proposed activities will likely include: electric or self-propelled boats, fishing, picnicking, camping in specified areas, and other passive recreational uses. Because the reservoir's primary purpose is drinking water supply, there will be some limits to recreational activities to protect water quality. Activities that will not be allowed include: the use of boats powered by gas, diesel, or other internal combustion engines; swimming, diving, snorkeling, or scuba diving; and hunting.

The Reservoir Management Plan has been approved by the Georgia Environmental Protection Division and is available in PDF Version.
